Ed Noeltner's Cinema Management Group (CMG) has sold domestic rights to Moriah Films' anti-semitism documentary Ever Again to Rocky Mountain Pictures.

Ever Again is the eighth documentary feature produced by Moriah Films, a division of the Simon Wiesenthal Center, and explores the resurgence of violent anti-semitism across Europe.

The distributor plans a Dec 8 limited release in Los Angeles and New York and will expand into 10 cities after that. The picture received its international premiere at the Deauville Film Festival in Sept.

Richard Trank directed based on a screenplay he co-wrote with Simon Wiesenthal Center founder and dean Rabbi Marvin Hier, who also produced.

CMG is the exclusive sales agent on the entire Moriah Films slate and Noeltner negotiated the deal with Rocky Mountain Pictures chief Randy Slaughter.

"We've had tremendous success with finding niche gems like One Night With The King and releasing them to an underserved North American audience," Slaughter said. "We feel that Ever Again is that type of film: challenging, thought provoking, political and exciting to watch."

CMG has already sold Ever Again in a number of overseas territories. Deals have concluded with Germany/Austria (Polyband), France (Bac Films), the Benelux (TDM Releasing), the UK (Stax International), Scandinavia (Camro Films), Portugal (Filmes Unimundos), the former Yugoslavia (ProVision), Israel (Digital Media), Brazil (Swen Distribution), and Mexico (Quality Films).
