Cinema Management Group answers Operator call

14 January, 2015 | By Jeremy Kay

Cinema Management Group (CMG) has acquired all international rights to the thriller starring Luke Goss and Mischa Barton and will commence talks at the EFM in Berlin next month.

Amariah and Obin Olson co-direct the film with Timothy Woodward Jr and produce through their production company, Brothers Olson.

Dwain Worrell, the brothers and Anthony Feole co-wrote the screenplay about a 911 operator and her estranged police officer husband dragged into a game of cat-and-mouse with a sadistic caller.

Ving Rames rounds out the key cast.

"When I screened Unknown Caller, I was convinced the Brothers Olson were two very talented directors with whom we should do their next title," said CMG president Edward Noeltner.

"So a little over a year later, it's very gratifying to see that they have upped their craft with Operator. The film is full of daring action stunts that propel the narrative to an edge-of-your-seat level.

"We are delighted to be in business with these talented filmmakers and are excited to be showing an extensive promo of Operator to our international clients in Berlin."

"We are excited to be working with Edward and the team at CMG on Operator and look forward to much success in the coming months," said Obin Olson.
